MAINEHEALTH MID COAST HOSPITAL

2025: Year in Review

Each year, the goal of the MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital annual report is to provide a snapshot of the many accomplishments from the last year across our programs and services. It also serves as an opportunity to thank those who provide generous financial support of our work.

A theme that runs through the following pages is our connection with the community. You'll meet the chairs of this year's annual campaign and one of our exceptional pet therapy volunteers (as well as her horse, Elias, and her dog, Kenzy).

The grand opening of the MaineHealth Lois N. Skillings Health Center on the Parkview Campus, and our new Lifestyle Medicine program are also featured.

You will also get a glimpse of our exciting plan for a new cancer center. When completed, it will bring expanded IV therapy, cancer care, radiation oncology and innovative technology to the hospital campus. This project reflects a $20 million investment by MaineHealth to support cancer care in our community.

To say we could not have achieved all this without you is an understatement.

We are fortunate to have so many corporators and donors whose involvement and generosity allows us to grow and sustain important services in the Midcoast. Those who wish to be recognized for their support are acknowledged in this report.

I am grateful for and humbled by your continued support, and I consider it a privilege to witness firsthand the unwavering commitment to high-quality, patient-centered care that our care team delivers every day.

I hope you feel a sense of pride and achievement as you read this report.

Sincerely,

Chris Bowe, MD, FACEP

Volunteer Profile: Meet Mary Boutin

For the last 12 years, Mary Boutin has witnessed firsthand the therapeutic value and joy a pet can bring to individuals at any age.

Mary is one of the many volunteers who choose to bring their pets to visit hospital patients and senior care residents at MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital and MaineHealth Mid Coast Senior Health Center. “Sometimes, it’s just a smile or a quiet little pat that makes a difference in a person’s life,” she said.

Mary began her visits in 2013, with Sadie, her first therapy dog. She and Sadie visited many places together until Sadie passed away unexpectedly in 2019, and Mary found herself without a dog. Then COVID arrived in Maine and visits to health care facilities shut down.

When hospitals, schools and senior centers lessened visiting restrictions, Mary was back at it with her new yellow Labrador retriever, Kenzy, and her horse, Elias.

“Kenzy and Elias have the same personality. They have a calm, quiet old-soul presence,” she said. “I am a bit more mindful with Elias because of his size. But nothing startles him.”

Kenzy’s specialty is working with children, so along with visiting the hospital, they go to Harpswell Elementary, where the students read to them. Clarvida’s K-12 day school for children with autism spectrum disorders, developmental disabilities and mental health diagnoses is part of the visiting routine as well.

Mary and Elias’s special talents were on display when they visited MaineHealth Mid Coast Senior Health in the summer. One by one, a handful of residents had a few moments of their own engaging with the more than 20-year-old horse.

Elias clearly knew why he was there, lowering his nose and face so the residents could pet him. The connections between horse and human were powerful, and the smiles were contagious.

Staff at the health center are uplifted by the visits, as are care team members at the hospital when Mary and Kenzy arrive at their appointed rounds.

“I think we do as much good for the staff as we do for the patients and residents. They know our schedule, they see us more often, and they look forward to it,” Mary said. “It gives them a moment to themselves and a chance to smile during a busy or stressful day.”

Mary said the Alliance of Therapy Dogs offers certification through their program, which requires testing and three separate observations. She volunteers with the Alliance as an observer-tester when able, and she enjoys the experience.

So, what type of dog makes a good therapy dog? “A lot is just the dog’s natural disposition,” she said. “A well-rounded, socialized and well-behaved dog that enjoys meeting people, and an attentive owner, work best.”

Mary said she has no plans to stop doing what she loves in the next several years. She’s healthy, as are her animals.

“It is so rewarding for me to share my animals with people,” she said.

Building the Future of Cancer Care

MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital continues to make progress toward the creation of our new Cancer Care Center, an important step in our mission to provide high-quality, comprehensive care close to home. Over the past year, a series of major projects have moved us closer to realizing this vision, while strengthening services across our Mid Coast Hospital and Parkview campuses.

The newly completed MaineHealth Lois N. Skillings Health Center on the MaineHealth Parkview Campus is now home to all our ambulatory behavioral health services. The bright, welcoming space was designed to promote healing and connection, providing a more comfortable environment for patients and care team members alike. We also renovated space to relocate the rheumatology practice, expanding access to specialty care for our community. The registration area was redesigned to offer a modern, inviting first impression for everyone who walks through our doors.

Several additional projects are already underway and will be completed by early 2026. Construction has begun to relocate our Neurology team to 121 Medical Center Drive, an important step in preparing for the new Cancer Care Center. Work is also in progress to move orthopedic therapy services to the MaineHealth Parkview campus, allowing us to expand this practice to meet growing community needs.

Looking ahead, 2026 will bring even more visible progress. Plans include renovating space at 81 Medical Center Drive to bring all oncology services together under one roof, building a vault for a new linear accelerator to provide radiation therapy, and constructing an external pharmacy to serve our infusion center and patients receiving cancer care.

“Each step is bringing us closer to our vision of the new Cancer Care Center,” MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital President Chris Bowe, MD, said. “This work reflects the strength of our partnerships in MaineHealth and our shared commitment to providing exceptional care close to home. The project is about more than a new facility. It’s about bringing together the people, expertise and resources to support our community through every stage of cancer care.”

If you would like to make a gift to support MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital, or have any questions, please contact Seth Martin by phone at 207-373-2247 or email seth.martin@mainehealth.org.

MaineHealth Lifestyle Medicine: Expanding Access to Wellness and Prevention

In October, MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital celebrated the re-naming and expansion of its Lifestyle Medicine program with a community open house at the MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital Parkview Campus. Formerly known as the Mid Coast Center for Community Health and Wellness, MaineHealth Lifestyle Medicine Brunswick now offers a broader range of programs designed to help community members prevent, treat and reverse chronic disease through science-backed lifestyle changes.

The open house welcomed neighbors and friends for an evening of live music, refreshments and interactive demonstrations highlighting the six pillars of lifestyle medicine: whole food, plant-predominant nutrition; regular physical activity; restorative sleep; stress management; avoidance of risky substances; and positive social connection. Guests toured new spaces, including the Social Hub and Food Pantry, and met the care team members leading these transformative programs.

Lifestyle Medicine is at the heart of MaineHealth's vision of "working together so our communities are the healthiest in America." By addressing the root causes of disease, the program provides practical tools and resources to support healthier living, especially for individuals managing chronic conditions such as heart disease, type 2 diabetes, high cholesterol and obesity.

"We have been providing excellent health, wellness and education programs for many years," MaineHealth Lifestyle Medicine Brunswick Director Cate Parker said. "We are very excited to enhance our offerings by focusing on proven lifestyle medicine interventions. These programs allow us to partner with people to focus on positive lifestyle changes which both treat and prevent chronic health conditions. Small, deliberate and sustainable changes have a lasting impact on health. We're excited to expand our programs and provide more opportunities for our community to live healthier lives."

Programming spans a wide variety of interests and needs, from nutrition education such as Food Is Medicine and Celebrity Chef demonstrations, to fitness opportunities including Walk With a Doc and Yoga for Daily Living. Stress reduction classes, restorative sleep workshops, tobacco treatment support and health education series like Understanding Parkinson's Disease further round out offerings that focus on the whole person.

The emphasis on community connection is also central to MaineHealth Lifestyle Medicine's mission. The new Social Hub at the Parkview Campus provides a welcoming place for participants to engage with one another, fostering relationships that enhance both emotional and physical health. These initiatives create pathways to healthier living that go beyond traditional medical care, empowering people to take an active role in their well-being.

As MaineHealth Lifestyle Medicine expands, it continues to embody MaineHealth's commitment to prevention and whole-person care. The program stands as a vital resource for residents of the Midcoast region and offers proven strategies to improve health outcomes and quality of life.

Recognizing Excellence: Awards, Certifications and Accreditations

In 2025, MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital continued to earn state and national recognition for excellence in patient care, public health and environmental stewardship. These awards and certifications reflect our ongoing commitment to quality, safety, innovation and community health, as well as the dedication of our care teams who make these achievements possible.

MID COAST CONTINUES TOP PERFORMANCE IN BREATHE EASY PROGRAM

In April, MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital received Platinum-Level Recognition from the MaineHealth Center for Tobacco Independence’s Breathe Easy Initiative. This Gold Star Standards of Excellence Award highlights our comprehensive smoke- and tobacco-free campus policies and our commitment to helping patients quit tobacco. Facilities across the state were evaluated on best practices such as screening for tobacco use, referring patients to treatment and training staff in tobacco intervention.

ENVIRONMENTAL SUSTAINABILITY PROGRAM EARNS GREENHEALTH AWARD

Environmental sustainability was another area of achievement in 2025. MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital earned the Practice Greenhealth Partner for Change Award, joining only about 260 hospitals nationwide recognized for superior performance in energy conservation, waste reduction and mercury elimination. This award underscores our ongoing efforts to integrate environmental stewardship into daily operations. These initiatives included installing pipe and jacket insulation to reduce thermal energy loss, creating a blue wrap art project to promote awareness of surgical waste and beginning a five-year sustainable landscaping transformation.

MAINEHEALTH MID COAST HOSPITAL NAMED LARGE BUSINESS OF THE YEAR

In addition to clinical and environmental honors, MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital was named the Large Business of the Year by the Bath-Brunswick Regional Chamber of Commerce. This award recognizes the hospital’s commitment to the community through volunteerism, leadership and innovative employment practices. Celebrating Pride Month at MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital

MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital proudly celebrated Pride Month with events and resources highlighting our commitment to inclusion and support for the LGBTQ+ community.

The month began with a Pride flag raising on June 2 at 123 Medical Center Drive, where President Christopher Bowe, MD, read a poem to mark the occasion. From June 2-6, an information table outside the hospital café offered educational resources for patients, visitors and care team members. Hospital representatives, including the Community Health team, also joined Bath Pride at Waterfront Park on June 13 and Brunswick Pride at the Brunswick Mall on June 14.

New Behavioral Health Center Opens on Parkview Campus

MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital marked an important milestone this year with the opening of its newly renovated Behavioral Health Center on the MaineHealth Parkview Health Center campus. By bringing services together from three separate locations into one, the center improves access, coordination and continuity of care, helping patients stay engaged in treatment and on the path to wellness.

At the ribbon cutting on June 3, community members and care team providers heard firsthand how access to behavioral health care can change lives. Mandy Lewis, who has been in recovery for six years, shared how the support she received from MaineHealth Behavioral Health providers helped her find stability and maintain sobriety. “You have to keep trying to be sober,” she said. “It took me several years and a lot of support from family and many different caregivers to succeed. The programs offered at this location can start you on your journey to sobriety and keep you there.”

The new center honors the legacy of former Mid Coast Hospital President Lois Skillings, RN, who was recognized for more than 43 years of service to the community. Named the MaineHealth Lois N. Skillings Health Center, the facility stands as a testament to her vision of compassionate, patient-centered care.

Leaders and board members from MaineHealth flank Lois Skillings, former president of MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital as she cuts the ribbon on the new behavioral health center.

MaineHealth Food Pantry Opens in Brunswick

The MaineHealth Food Pantry Brunswick, located at the MaineHealth Parkview Campus, opened its doors this year to help address one of the most fundamental needs for good health: access to nutritious food. Currently serving patients and care team members at the Parkview Campus and Walk-In Care Brunswick, the pantry is designed to expand in the future to support the wider community.

Set up like a small market, the pantry offers free, healthy food in a confidential and welcoming space. By providing access to fresh produce and nutritious staples, the pantry reinforces the critical connection between diet and overall well-being, ensuring patients and care team members can focus on health without the added stress of food insecurity.

This initiative is made possible through a partnership with Mid Coast Hunger Prevention Program and through the dedication of our care team members who refer patients and help spread the word.

The new food pantry at the MaineHealth Parkview Campus is a resource for both patients and care team members.

Dr. Nirav Shah Headlines Paris Lecture at MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital

How prepared are we for the next pandemic? That pressing question was the focus of this year’s Herbert and Harriet Paris Healthcare Leaders Lecture, hosted by MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital on July 10. The event welcomed Dr. Nirav Shah, a nationally recognized public health leader and former director of the Maine Center for Disease Control and Prevention, as keynote speaker.

Dr. Shah drew on his extensive experience guiding Maine through the COVID-19 pandemic to reflect on lessons learned and to explore how health care systems can better prepare for future public health challenges. His presentation highlighted both the critical role of local health systems in times of crisis and the importance of collaboration across sectors to ensure communities are resilient in the face of uncertainty.

The Herbert and Harriet Paris Healthcare Leaders Lecture, established in 2011 through an endowment, was created to bring national voices in health care to Mid Coast Hospital and to spark meaningful conversations that reach beyond the walls of the hospital. By addressing topics of broad importance, the lecture series strengthens the connection between health care providers and the communities they serve.

This year’s lecture underscored the enduring value of the series: creating a forum where local clinicians and community members can engage with national leaders on the issues that matter most to the health and well-being of our region.

Trek Across Maine: Pedaling for a Purpose

Care team members from MaineHealth Mid Coast, Pen Bay and Waldo Hospitals, as well as long-time community supporters came together this summer to ride in the 41st annual Trek Across Maine, raising more than $18,000 in support of lung health.

The team’s dedication and determination earned them a spot among the top five fundraising teams, helping the American Lung Association bring in a total of $687,000 to advance research, education and advocacy in the fight against lung cancer, COPD, asthma and other serious lung diseases.

Leading the charge was team captain Janet Moore, RN, from the Mid Coast Hospital Cardiology department. Under her leadership, the group trained, fundraised and ultimately rode 165 miles over three days.

Stroke Care Program Earns National Accreditation

MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital achieved Primary Stroke Center re-certification from The Joint Commission following a rigorous unannounced review. This certification signals that we provide expert, around-the-clock stroke care using advanced diagnostics, clinical best practices and continuous performance improvement to support better outcomes for patients.

Donor Profile: Meet The Geigers

Margie and Jeff Geiger understand the importance of giving back.

Since coming to Bath, the Geigers have supported organizations like the United Way, the Patten Free Library, the Bath YMCA and MaineHealth Mid Coast Hospital. They've served as board members, volunteers and made donations to many important causes.

If you look back at any major expansion project, like the high school expansion, the YMCA childcare expansion, or the merger between Bath Memorial Hospital and Regional Memorial Hospital that formed Mid Coast Hospital in 1991, the Geigers were actively involved.

Now, in 'retirement,' the Geigers seem busier than ever.

"When I see people at a community meeting, they'll ask 'What hat are you wearing tonight?' " Margie said. "We feel fortunate to be in this community, and we think it is pretty important to do what we can."

The journey to Midcoast Maine began in 1983, when Jeff came to Bath Iron Works (BIW) from the University of Michigan. He was studying naval architecture and marine engineering and looking for practical experience.

"There are not many internships out there. It's a pretty specialized field," he said. "Bath Iron Works was a leading shipyard, so I came here for my undergraduate internship and before returning to Michigan for graduate school."

Margie attended a smaller university in Michigan, and after Jeff and Margie were married in 1984, they headed back east to return to Maine. Jeff had accepted a job at BIW, while Margie worked as an office nurse at the then Parkview Adventist Hospital in Dr. Myron Krueger's internal medicine office.

The Geigers raised two children here; both were born at Parkview. As their children grew, they were impressed with the schools, along with the commitment of fellow parents and the community.

"The schools were great, the parent support of the schools was strong and the families were terrific. We also had the Maritime Museum, the library, a great downtown and much more. It was a wonderful place to raise a family," said Margie.

Jeff began his career as a production planner at the shipyard. "I loved the internal operations, construction activities, and the skill and pride of the tradesmen building a super complex project," he said.

Jeff rose through the management ranks and was the president of BIW from 2009-2013. He then was transferred by General Dynamics to serve as president of Electric Boat, where he oversaw submarine production at facilities in Rhode Island and Connecticut.

"While I missed BIW, I enjoyed the challenges of building nuclear-powered submarines. The regulatory and quality standards are much more rigorous," he said.

While Jeff and Margie describe their family health care needs as routine, they were impressed by the care and services provided locally.

"The quality of the physicians and the nursing care was amazing," Margie said. "The administration was terrific ... ." The closure of Bath Memorial Hospital was a big deal in town. Many people weren't happy, but the leaders knew just how to manage that and see it through."

As health care costs and insurance premiums soared during Jeff's time at BIW, he was impressed that Mid Coast Hospital Presidents Herb Paris and Lois Skillings initiated conversations and proposed different ideas to focus on employee wellness and reduce the cost to employers.

"Health care was one of our largest overhead costs," he said. "They recognized this was a big deal for BIW, and they reached out. As a result, we did a lot in partnership over time."

Today, when the Geigers have free time, they enjoy sailing along the Maine coastline.

"Some of the best sailing waters in the world are here in Maine," Jeff said. "The beauty of the Maine coastline and all the islands make it a playground to enjoy while under sail."

They also love to travel abroad and spend time "not too far off the grid" on road trips living the van life. And when winter rolls around, it's off to the slopes at Sugarloaf.

The Geigers chose to chair this year's Annual Campaign because they know the importance of both local care and local philanthropic support.

"When I look around the state seeing health care facilities going away and services becoming limited, I recognize we are fortunate to be in a place where MaineHealth is investing and growing the services," Jeff said. "MaineHealth is invested in us, and I think it's important for the community to show we are invested, too."
